

Ashwagandha Fusion Complete

"Queen of Ayurveda" meets science

The use of ashwagandha root has a tradition dating back over 1000 years. As one of the most valuable plants in Ayurvedic teachings, it is particularly well known for its adaptogenic properties. Adaptogens are plant extracts and preparations that help to provide the body with the necessary calm during stressful situations that occur almost daily. Personal well-being and consciously taking time for rest and relaxation are increasingly pushed into the background in times of constant tension due to time and performance pressure and can put a strain on the psyche. It is therefore all the more important to support the body in order to allow it to take a breather during periods of increased stress and to maintain inner balance - ashwagandha is the right choice for this.

In Ayurveda, the entire ashwagandha plant is used; in Western nations, only the root is usually used. Ashwagandha Fusion Complete uses a full spectrum blend of ashwagandha root extract and an extract from the entire plant to cover the entire spectrum of active ingredients in the plant. The various biologically active withanolides responsible for the adaptogenic effects are found in the whole plant - the combination of extracts from all parts of the plant achieves a high, standardized content of 35 mg per capsule.
