

Best Age Superior

Happiness lies in old age.

The biological clock is ticking - for each and every one of us. But that's no reason to let your hair grow gray! After all, according to a study, we are happiest between the ages of 58 and 77. In order to be able to enjoy the "autumn of life" as long as possible in a fit and vital state, we should ideally start to influence our biological age (= physical age) at a young age. In addition to regular exercise, abstaining from stimulants, sufficient space for relaxation and a good dose of optimism, nutrition also plays a central role in "good ageing". Even late bloomers should bear this in mind: It's never too late to take your biological age into your own hands.
